

Mid Year Review

June 24, 2014

Already reached the half point mark in 2014. Time flew this year.

For the past 3 years, I have focused on finding stability in my personal situation, and the website. Found a job in Korea, started tutoring on the side, and really thought about a products based business. Stability was the main goal. However, in 2014, we aimed for growth and expansion.

In 2014, I began teaching at Chungdam Institute, which provides a much more stable income stream. Also, I received a promotion at my job (now running 4 years in my position) to Senior Analyst and Korean title is now 과장. All glory to God! I bought tools to solder and build stuff. I am getting inspiration from Youtube video clips and an app called Instructables. My goal is to make a Bluetooth device and sell it on Coupang by the end of 2014.

Besides the mentioned ventures, I am praying for more insight. Millionaires have this in common – they all have multiple revenue streams. Once the product venture works, this can be replicated into dozens of other products, and services. I really want to do import/export, and working to build the seed capital for that.

In my QT, I have read the entire New Testament, and reading Leviticus.

At church, changed the interior and placed new signs and redid the interior for the kids room. We started a joint service on a monthly basis, and we may do a joint summer retreat with another church.

As for the website, I haven't written as much reports, but the work for the subsidiary businesses – English tutoring and SN Electronics has been underway. I have met 3 of the interns this year, ate dinner, had beers, drank coffee on multiple occasions. It is very weird to see them in person because they were in the US at the time of the internship. I didn't think I would meet any of them in person. One of the interns, found an internship at a PE firm and I am so happy for him.

I am praying for a period of growth and expansion, both in my work life and church life and personal life.

I want to travel more with my family, within Korea, enjoying what Korea has to offer.

I am holding on to 2 Chr. 7. There is a particular verse about repentance. When we humble ourselves and pray, God will forgive us our sins and heal our land. This may seem contradictory to growth because we are looking at our past mistakes. But I believe in order to grow, we must turn from what is wrong, and from a solid foundation, continue to grow on that. For growth, we must have repentance and a time to reprioritize and make changes. As individuals, family units, country and the Church, we must repent, turn from our old ways, and push forward in truth, as we go from glory to glory.

Thank you Jesus for all that You are doing through my life and the people around me. You alone are our Strength and Provider and Healer. You alone Jesus. Thank you. We praise Your name. Amen.
